ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus for open data collection is provided. The method of machine learning comprises setting up a system for learning, the system having certain goals. The method further comprising presenting queries to non-expert netizens over a network, the netizens participating in the training process. Then, based on responses to the queries, the method continually updating the system and refining the queries.